

The Daily Telegraph

BRITAIN'S BEST QUALITY NEWSPAPER

Union plan for schools to go week on, week off

Head teachers' leaders criticise PM's push to get all children back into classrooms

By Tom Hattersley
and Laura Donohy

REBECCA Lister-Jones, general secretary of the National Education Union (NEU), has said that the union will go on strike if the government's plan to get all children back into classrooms by the end of the summer is not accepted.

The NEU is the largest union of teachers in the country, with 250,000 members. It has been a vocal critic of the government's plan to get all children back into classrooms by the end of the summer.

The union's plan is to go on strike if the government's plan is not accepted. The union's plan is to go on strike if the government's plan is not accepted.

The union's plan is to go on strike if the government's plan is not accepted. The union's plan is to go on strike if the government's plan is not accepted.

Captive belugas make a splash

Two belugas that had not been in the sea for three days were hoisted on to the deck of the ship, off the coast of Scotland, in the afternoon of Monday. The ship is the M/V Lalla Rookh, a fishing vessel, and the whales were taken from the sea by the crew of the ship.

Breakthrough Alzheimer's drug on fast track

By Laura Ross

A new Alzheimer's drug, which works by helping to clear amyloid plaques from the brain, could be the first to be approved for use in the UK, according to a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The drug, called lecanemab, is the first to be approved for use in the UK. It is a monoclonal antibody that targets amyloid plaques, which are thought to be a key feature of Alzheimer's disease.

The drug is being developed by Eisai and Biogen. It is currently in phase 3 clinical trials. The drug is being developed by Eisai and Biogen.

BBC boss sorry for 'N-word' in news report

By Stephanie

The BBC's general manager has apologized for a "very serious" error in a news report that used the N-word to describe a group of people.

The error occurred in a news report on Monday. The report used the N-word to describe a group of people. The error occurred in a news report on Monday.

The error occurred in a news report on Monday. The report used the N-word to describe a group of people. The error occurred in a news report on Monday.

Daily Covid death count could be scrapped

By James

The daily Covid death count, which has been a key feature of the news, could be scrapped, according to a report in the Financial Times.

The report says that the daily death count is no longer as useful as it once was. The report says that the daily death count is no longer as useful as it once was.

The report says that the daily death count is no longer as useful as it once was. The report says that the daily death count is no longer as useful as it once was.

NEWS BRIEFING

- Puzzles 18
- Celebrities 27
- TV listings 29
- Weather 30

NEWS

Portugal could be taken off the 'red list'

Portugal could be taken off the 'red list' of countries that require a 14-day quarantine for travellers, according to a report in the Financial Times.

NEWS

Victims abandon rape and assault cases

Victims of rape and assault are abandoning their cases, according to a report in the Financial Times.

NEWS

Weca not protect ourselves from this new wave of immigration

Weca is not protecting ourselves from this new wave of immigration, according to a report in the Financial Times.

The Daily Telegraph
 (Circulation 317,817; Points 14)
 8th August
 2020*Following Kate Boltions PT

(IMAGE 1 OF 4)

IF IT'S THE FIRST TIME... ...going wild for Iceland

...rugged Atlantic coastline as a winter destination but Chris Leadbetter wants to its charms whatever the season

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

CENSAL AREAS

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

WELL-HEELED Far from the madding crowds in Puglia's palazzi

The Daily Telegraph (Circulation 317,817; Points 14) 8th August 2020*Following Kate Boltons PT

(IMAGE 2 OF 4)

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...
...the best of the island's...

Far from the madding crowds in Puglia's palazzi

With its long summers and even longer coastlines, Puglia offers the perfect antidote to weeks of lockdown under Fair Albion's grey skies. The many glitterati seduced by this area in recent years has transformed the once stout and sensible heel of Italy into a chic and sexy stiletto.

Reflecting its new look, the latest hotel trends here breathe contemporary style into historic palazzi - stately residences from the heyday of Apulian splendour.

To escape the holiday crowds, head down to Gagliano del Capo, just a pebble's throw from the cape that divides the Adriatic and Ionian seas. From the headland, on a clear day, you can see the little Greek island of Othonoi and the Albanian coast. Gagliano is well off the tourist radar - an indolent place to laze in the adagio rhythms of provincial Italian life.

The grandest building in town, Palazzo Daniele, opened to visitors last year, though from the moment you knock at its monumental doors (where any form of a hotel sign is conspicuous in its absence), you'll feel less like a tourist and more like a guest of the owner. Francesco Petrucci - a Gatsby-like figure who lives in a wing of the palace, "among the whisperings and the champagne" - inherited this imposing porticoed pile from his ancestors, the patrician Daniele family. Built at the end of the Risorgimento - the revolutionary period so poignantly evoked in Lampedusa's novel (and Visconti's film) The Leopard - the place has a wistful nobility; lingering here is like entering the pages of the book, where

THE DETAILS

Palazzo Daniele
Corso Umberto I,
60, Gagliano del Capo
(00 39 08 335 33185;
palazzo.daniele.com)
Double rooms from €350

experiences that immerse you in Puglia's traditions: catch sea urchins with a local fisherman, cook Salentino specialities with earth-mother chef Donata Rizzo, or visit the annual Capo d'Arte contemporary art exhibition curated in venues around town.

A couple of hours' drive along the rocky east coast will take you to Ostuni, the ancient "White City" founded by the Greeks, set in Biblical olive groves and edged by the Adriatic Sea. Here, the newly opened Paragon 700 Boutique Hotel & Spa occupies a stately classical palazzo. Painted in Pompeian red, it lords it over the lime-washed medieval citadel.

The Daily Telegraph
(Circulation 317,817; Points 14) 8th August
2020*Following Kate Boltions PT

(IMAGE 3 OF 4)